THIRTY-THREE PRISONERS.

Those Who Faced Justice in Judge Kim ball's Court This Morning. There were nearly as many prisoners in the Police Court today as there were yesterday.

Thirty-three occupied the cells this morning and a number of familiar faces were in the first procession that appeared in Judge Kimball's court. Real Estate Matters.

Albaugh's.—Rhea, the handsome dramatic star, presented at Albaugh's last night an adap-tation of Eugene Scribe's historical play, "La Czarina," in five acts, only the last three of whites and blacks and the charges were about the former instance. She Englishes the lines much better, also, and every word is intelligible. Her gowns are extremely handself. Mr. Harris as Peter the Grea fifteen days.

HIS FIRST OFFENSE.

Policeman John Geghan of the eighth precinct was the prosecuting witness in the case of James Johnson, who made his debut in legal circles today.

A pretty character, prettily done, was that of Miss Una Abell as Olga. Mr. Amony's Villerbeck was the only touch of comedy in the play.

Mr. Dunbar's Prince Menzikoff is susceptible of improvement, and Mr. Caruth's Jokinsky was as unbending as iron.

The facts of history are not fellowed very closely, which, however, does not destroy the interet of the story, and the last three acts are almost absorbing. The whole strength is quiet, but it is unceasing and the closest atten-tion of the audience is compelled to the finish. A comfortable house full was present and it was noticeable that no move was made toward de-parture until the curtain was clear down on the last act, something not always characteristic of five-act plays. Again tonight.

NATIONAL THEATER.—Miss Rosina Vokes was welcomed back to this city last night by a large audience at the National Theater. Miss Vokes, with her hearty, rippling, infectious laugh, her graceful dancing, her hoydenish but never coarse comedy and her thorough carnestness in her work, is a prime favorite in Washington and the applause she received last night was an emphatic indication of the appre-ciation of her acting. There were three pieces on the program—"A Game of Cards," "My Milliner's Bill" and "A Pantomime Rehearsal" all of which have theen seen here before, but which were enjoyed with great relish by the audience. In the first Mr. Felix Morris has one of his best character parts and easily carries off the honors. In the second Miss Vokes appears to excellent advantage and is highly amusing. while in the third there were some new feat-ures that made the travesty on amateur thestricals even more funny than formerly. There well-dressed young woman appeared and an-swered a charge of vagrancy. ACADEMY OF MUSIC. - A great deal that is interesting was expected in the performance of "Men and Women" at the Academy of Music last night, and there was no disappointment. The large audience showed that theater goers here appreciated the opportunity of seeing a play that has created so much comment. Its title is a strong and unique one. Its natural interpretation would be that the people with whom it deals are familiar figures of everyday lile. Taking it in this aspect the play is not especially complimentary to the men nor, if the present company represents the author's ideals, extravagant in its flattery of the women. There are two very gentlemanly and agreeable defaulters, one who has served in the peniten-Rebecca declared that she was not real drunk tiary and has since become a man of influence, and that she was on her way to purchase a box another who is just on the verge of a dishonest of snuff when the policeman arrested her. There is a peculiar study of character in the young man who sits by without a word and hears his brother charged with the crime of which he is guilty; who even sees him taken into custody by the police and remains deaf to his pleadings, and then, having irrev-ocably branded himself a craven, throws down a pistol in heroic fashion and declares that he will not commit suicide because it is cowardly. Indeed, there is a general perversion of sympathy that makes the incidents when placed under scrutiny seem almost impossible the cast is a competent one in all respects and the play cannot fail to command general attention. It has dramatic intensity and some extension of detail. Of the ed under scrutiny seem almost impossible tremely praiseworthy strokes of detail. Of the players Mr. Theo. Guyer and Goodwin, dubbed "the two kids," were very funny, and Chip, the boy wonder, fol-lowed with a specialty that called forth storms of applause. Again tonight.

At Attempt at Suicide. Julia Newman attempted suicide last night by taking 714 grains of morphia, and this morning she was not out of danger. Julia is only about twenty-one years old, but the police say she has been leading a life of shame for something like ten years. She has been an inmate of several disreputable houses, and she was the cause of considerable trouble some months ago to a policeman whose application hung fire some time because of testimony she gave against a saloon formerly kept by him. Her parents resided in Georgetown for many years, but now her widowed mother lives in the

After taking the morphia at a place in the "Division" she went around to a saloon on Pennsylvania avenue, where she met a cab driver named Dennison. She told him what she had done and asked him to take her home to die, but instead of doing so he drove her to the Emergency Hospital, where Drs. THE ROCK CREEK PARK CASE.

The Arguments Ended Today-No Decisio Expected Before Next Wednesday The argument in the Rock Creek Park case before the Court in General Term came to an end this morning. It is not expected that a de cision will be announced by the court before next Monday, the next "opinion" day. Mr Wilson spoke for about half an hour this morn ing and finished his address. Mr. Wilson upon resuming his argument this morning briefly recounted some of the points made in his address yesterday. He said his clients, who owned 360 acres of this park land. simply wanted fair treatment. He argued again that the court had no power, scting judicially, as he claimed it must act, to confirm of report exceeding the amount beyond which the government said it would not go. He went urther and insisted that if the court held that it had the power the report should not be con firmed, as a fair examination would show tha the awards were not in accordance with the evidence. It was said in the argument that two-thirds of the owners had tacitly assented to the report. Why they assented he could no say. Owners of small tracts might feel that the amount involved in their cases might not be sufficient to compensate them for a struggle against the government. He compared the awards made to some of those who had accepted and argued that there was a great disparity. He referred to the award of over $934 for a quar-ter-acre tract to Samuel Dickson, which had originally been a part of the Shoemaker tract. This, he claimed, was at the rate of $3,636 an

Mr. Perry said that this award included improvements. It was a quarter of an acre highly cultivated, with fruit trees and vines and a house and stable. IN WHOLE OR IN PART. Mr. Wilson argued that the report must be confirmed or rejected as a whole, and could not be confirmed or rejected in part. The statute under which these proceedings were taken, he said, was unique, and the statute itself, he said, showed that the whole tract was to be condemned. When a report was made which it was found could in any respect not be main-tained, the whole proceeding must fail. The statute directed the court to deal with the whole tract. All of the tracts were involved in one common proceeding. In replying to a question from the bench as to the power of the court to refer the report or any part of it back, Mr. Wilson said that that was a grave question and one which he did not care to an pate, but he did not believe this court could deal with the matter piecemeal.

Mr. Wilson closed his argument about 10:30 o'clock, and Mr. Robinson took the floor for a brief argument in reply to what had been said regarding the points he raised concerning the alternative awards made to his client, Mrs. Carpenter, for her rights in a portion of the land embraced in the Military road.

Mr. Perry said that there was no question
